What are the key Drivers Defining the UAE In Vitro Fertilization (IVF) Market Size?

Rising Secondary Infertility Cases to Escalate the Market Growth

The inability of women to conceive after having a child earlier has been growing in the UAE over the historical years. The major factors contributing to the soaring secondary infertility cases in the country comprised advanced age, overweight or underweight problems, hormonal conditions, lack of sun exposure, consanguinity, and damage from previous pregnancies such as C-section scar along with the lifestyle changes. According to the Canadian Specialist Hospital, one in five women experiencing infertility issues face secondary infertility in the UAE.

Moreover, the rising prevalence of male infertility due to unhealthy lifestyle, smoking, use of anabolic steroids, obesity, and diabetes is further supporting the growth of secondary infertility cases, consequently impacting the up surging demand for In Vitro Fertilization (IVF) in the country.
